A Home Rule Charter.

The draft of the new City Charter formal and final proposal of the Charter Revision Commission itself. It is a suggested charter submitted to the speak, for the commission to work on.

What changes the commission may make in this tentative instrument THE NEW YORK HERALD does not undertake to guess and how much further the commission can go in the direction of centering home rule powers in New York city The New YORK HERALD could not say.

But this draft now under consideration by the Charter Commission for further amendment and perfection is clearly responsive, as it should be, to the overwhelming popular sentiment of the community for all the home rule it can obtain under the Constitution of the State and all it can exercise without nullification of the sovereign authority of the

New York city never is going to be content until it possesses all the home rule powers that are obtainable from the State and it is the part of Commission to proceed with its work on those lines. It will be the part of wisdom for the State Government to go as far as it safely can go toward the same goal.
